Gas starts flowing to Poland through new Baltic Pipe pipeline

Reporting by Anna Wlodarczak-Semczuk

Gas started flowing to Poland through the new Baltic Pipe pipeline from Norway via Denmark and the Baltic Sea on Saturday morning, Polish gas pipeline operator Gaz-System said.

The pipeline is at the center of Poland's strategy to change its gas supplies away from Russia that began years before Moscow's February invasion of Ukraine started a global energy crisis.

A Gaz-System spokeswoman told Reuters that flows started at 6.10 a.m. and nominations, or requests for sending gas through the pipeline on October 1, totalled 62.4 million kilowatt-hours.

The pipeline, with every year capacity of 10 billion cubic meters, was officially opened on Tuesday, a day after leaks were detected under the sea Nord Stream gas pipelines connecting Russia to Europe.

Russia cut gas supplies to Poland in April when it refused to pay in Roubles.
