Bank of Japan signaled that its monetary easing policy will continue despite the continued depreciation of the Japanese Yen against the US dollar.

The Bank of Japan signaled that its monetary easing policy will continue despite the continued depreciation of the Japanese Yen against the US dollar.

The depreciation of the Japanese yen in the markets worries the government and Japanese financial authorities.

The yen is experiencing the fastest depreciation in 32 years against the dollar. On October 14 and 15, the Japanese yen dropped to 147 and then 149 against the US dollar. The Japanese national currency last saw similar levels in August 1990.

Kanda Masato, Deputy Minister of Finance responsible for foreign exchange movements, spoke after the World Bank and International Monetary Fund (IMF) meeting in Washington.

Stating that they have become more cautious against excessive volatility in the markets, Kanda Masato said, "The probability that necessary measures can be taken is increasing. BoJ President Kuroda Haruhiko said that despite the depreciation, they will continue monetary easing in order to meet the BoJ's 2 percent inflation targets with income growth.

THE POSSIBILITY TO BE TAKEN INCREASE

- Kanda Masato

The weak yen is seen as a "double-edged sword".

While Japanese exporters increase their overseas profits, the increase in energy and raw material import input costs cannot be prevented.

What Is Climate Change?

What Is Climate Change;

What Is The Impact Of Climate Change;

Climate change means weather, precipitations and temperatures are changing. Climate change has a lot of reasons such as fossil fuel. Fossil fuels grow after so many years under the land then go to petrol central. When fossil fuels burned, they spread carbon dioxide gas into the atmosphere.

The World Is Getting Warmer

Scientists are saying that if we want don't affect by climate change's bad results, we must slow down temperature rises. They say global warming needs to be kept to 1.5C by 2100. If we do not prevent this problem, A report in 2021 by Climate Action say that the earth will heat 2 C toward the end of this century. If nothing does not well, scientists is predicting that global warming will be 4C the future which means a lot of plants a lot of animals will die and the ecological balance will break.

climate change's results a lot of plant species, a lot of animal briefly a lot of alive will give damage. Some agricultural regions may become deserts because of drought. some plants might die then the ecological balance may break .if ecological balance break, not only plants, animals; alive and not alive everything may become a bad situation such as people, land, weather, temperatures, water, and atmosphere so this balance pretty significant for us.

HOW WILL DIFFERENT PARTS OF THE WORLD BE AFFECTED ?

The earth will change completely different places. Some areas may be rainy areas anymore, and some cold areas such as the polar region might change with the warm line. The UK and Europe will be vulnerable to flooding caused by extreme rainfall. Countries in the Middle East will experience extreme heatwaves and farmland could turn to desert. Island nations in the Pacific region could disappear under rising seas. Many African nations are likely to suffer from droughts and food shortages. Drought conditions are likely in the western US, while other areas will see more intense storms.

What Can Individuals Do?

Scientists say some small changes in our lives can limit our impact on the climate. Take fewer flights. Live car-free or use an electric car. Buy energy efficient products, such as washing machines, when they need replacing. Switch from a gas heating system to an electric heat pump. Insulate your home.
