

Chapter 1 – The Lives in Pre-War

In The Middle Earth, many races lived in particular areas and did some duty to maintain peaceful times. Elves live in Rivendale, where elves construct a castle on a gorgeous valley next to the sea, regarded as a bridge between Timeless Halls and Arda. Another race is that Hobbits live in plains and use tiny houses. On the one hand, humans depend on a kingdom, but this kingdom consists of 2 parts: West and East. On the other hand, dwarfs generally live in protective areas like mountains or massive mines. There are minor races, such as goblins, eagles, and beornings.

The last race is Maiars, also known as magicians, consisting of 7 maiars living in Middle Earth. However, there are more than seven maiars, but others are assigned to The Middle Earth's problems.

Each race has undertaken responsibilities. For example, in some specialties, healing, and strategy, elves are superior to other races. Meanwhile, hobbits live by their desires without doing anything to remain in peace because their characteristic traits are not appropriate for duties. However, humans constitute a considerable proportion of the Middle Earth population and assist and work coordinately with elves, thus engaging with elves. These races live in places near the vast forest. However, In These Forests, Beornings live in. They try to protect the forests and facilitate visitors and travelers to journey through the woods with scouts's aid. The beornings are ruled by King Beorn, but their kingdom comprises three clans, as they have unprecedented features coming from innate such as skin-changing and 5 meters height and their forces. Of these advantages, they are a small but ultra-effective race and change their bodies to gigantic bears to fight with someone or something. They conduct essential duties in the forest by scouts, who were selected and trained for fights, investigation, and taming. These scouts live in the forests' borders in order to control passengers and troubles. They shelter in farmhouses with animals that are tamed.

Chapter 2 The lives in The Great War period

Sauron forged many rings as gifts to leaders of races. However, he secretly forged a ring, manipulating other races and taking control over the rings' owners. Before enslaving the owners' rings, Sauron occupied some clans of the kingdoms, such as Beornings, because he wanted to take control of the forests to cut off communications with kingdoms and tribes. Therefore, Sauron completely demolished the kingdoms and families of beornings without scouts. Hence, Bjorn, leader of the scouts, strategically stood against Sauron and the orcs' armies so as to take revenge on Sauron with his fellows. After witnessing chaos and the end of their races, scouts informed people and elves about genocide and their conditions. Before participating in Innocent's armies, they battled with several legionary armies of orcs. That's why scouts were killed when they were moving on areas in which innocents had fought with Sauron and his followers for a while. In the meantime, Bjorn met with a council of innocent army leaders. When receiving news about scouts killed by legionaries, Bjorn was furious and left the meeting, and then he prepared to fight with legionaries all alone. Bjorn planned that when legionaries were passing through the forest, he entrapped the army that killed other scouts by coming from beyond their vision. He destroyed all armies and continued to fight with troops until he reached Sauron's castle, also known as Doom Mountain. When other innocent armies fought with him against orcs, he killed three leaders of orcs in a row before Sauron realized that he was superior to all orc leaders in the fights and then Sauron came to in front of the castle in order to fight with Bjorn. Sauron damaged vital wounds Bjorn, but still he tried to fight with Sauron. When Sauron defeated him, he respected him and then killed him with honor. After that, his body delivered innocents to be embedded with singing mournings by innocents

The Chapter 3 Post-War

The humans and other innocents captured the ring, managing others and other rings' owners. They used these rings' power against orcs' armies and manipulated the troops to deform the war lines. After this, humans and dwarfs took their position, which the orcs' troops gave them. They killed the armies separately. They took control of Sauron's mountain. Finally, they beat Sauron and Orcs completely.

On the one hand, Sauron is killed. Still, his mind is alive because it is a maiar who they are not destroyed. On the other hand, some orcs escape from war, and most of them are killed in the battle. Elves and humans built the sculpture of Bjorn and composed some songs and dirges by different races. However, they forget that Sauron's soul is still alive and he is immortal, and the ring is just one way to revive him, but still, there are many ways to retribute and retrieve his body. His soul is just waiting to recover rancorously. What is Sauron going to steps for revenge and retribution, how is Sauron managing this defeat, what are the other methods whereby Sauron can use, and how and what innocents will take precautions against Sauron?